MYSTERIOUS, UNEXPLAINED DISAPPEARANCES.MISSING PEOPLE CASE FILES. Volume 3. True stories.
How can someone literally vanish into thin air?
How does someone disappear without trace, never to be seen again?
Leaving only the smallest of clues behind?
Clues that often lead only to more questions?
Here are some of the most baffling cases of people disappearing...
Excerpts; '"Hell is all around me," was the last entry in her journal. "I chased death all my life because I was dead." Had she run off, unable to face her family and too depressed to stay where she felt so isolated? Investigators knew suicide was a strong possibility but they also couldn't rule out someone taking advantage of her when she was in a bad way. She had told her mom she was coming home.'

'He was on a night out with friends in uptown Charlotte when he was last seen in a bar there. The bar's surveillance cameras show him leaving alone around 2.30 am after becoming separated from his friends. Where he went after that however seems to be the mystery.'

'Later, the police were to uncover some curious video footage which seemed to hold a vital clue to her disappearance. From a hidden surveillance camera at an apartment complex about a mile away, a man is seen parking her car and exiting it on the day she went missing. The footage show a short Caucasian man with dark hair. No clear image of his face is available as a high fence obscure the view. Even NASA tried to make the image clearer for viewing but there was nothing more that could be done to enhance it. Some even said, because of the height of the person, that it could have been a woman.'

'In July, 2007, a backpack with the missing woman's possessions inside was found in a canal about twenty minutes from where her truck had been found the year before. There is no connecting body of water between the two places. Her gun was not inside it. Where was her gun and where was she?'

''I was out searching for her the from very beginning, and I came across a street girl who I asked if she'd ever seen my daughter. She said no then reached for a cross around her neck and kissed it and she said she will help find her. The next thing I knew the police called and asked me for my daughter's dental records because they said they'd found a female body. It wasn't my daughter; it was the same girl I'd spoken with who'd kissed her cross. She was killed and dumped'

In June 2011, a church group set off on a gentle hike to the Upper Yosemite Falls in the Yosemite National Park. One of the group never returned home. He had reached the summit with the rest of the group when they had spread out to take in the views. A two week long search began. The Park Service found no trace of the man; no evidence that could explain what could have happened to him. Park rangers found absolutely no clues. Tracker dogs formed part of the search group, along with two helicopters and the searchers covered a 70 square mile radius looking for him. In all, as the days progressed, over seventy separate search teams from several counties joined in the hunt for the man, with several tracker dogs in each team.'
