PROVERBS: Wisdom's Grace - 2 of 3: PROVERBS: God's Wisdom Today Dwaine Thomas Martin Intriguing, as it may seem, the Word of God holds a curious place in the hearts and minds of most. Without pressure, many of the great writers allude to its contents. A certain fascination embellishes the light of their text with hope and desire. Out of this heart-felt reference comes token response to the character of the Word of God. The study of God's Word has always given a most re-warding and satisfying sense of accomplishment. When the stu-dent finds the hidden nuggets of God's wisdom through the original writings, it can become quite valuable. For, "..it is the glory of God to conceal a thing; and the honor of kings is to search out a matter....".(Proverbs 25:2-KJV) Word-Study has always seemed to be a most challenging, and rewarding experience. With all of its' substance seldom is there a loss of meaningful expression. The paragraphs following each verse of text are the results of prayerful consideration. After meditating, Proverbs' produces further questions into a deeper manner of living. Those inquiries being how to perceive life, living, & lifestyle. Not always is there agreement upon the things that matter to all of us. Nevertheless, most certainly, we can agree, that we adhere to those precepts we feel to be correct; and often without regard to another's feelings, we stand by what we believe. Can the Word of God suggest areas where we may agree to disagree, though sublimely produce such fruit of thought that would dispel momentary disagreement and exchange it for purposeful conduct, attitude, and interpretation? What follows these verses are but thoughts; not some theological-based argument for bantering another's ideas or notions. If such thoughts cause one to deepen their relationship with God, then so be it. If such thoughts are useless to others, then so be it. However, to ridicule another's thoughts with contempt, simply because they do not fit our method of interpretation, takes a dim and narrow view. Difference often finds use for creating purposeful pursuit of topics, concepts, and conclusions that could bring greater revelation to our lifetime.
