We Seek After These Things: The 13th Article of Faith John Bytheway
The first twelve Articles of Faith describe what we believe, but the thirteenth begins, We believe in being. More than just a list of beliefs, the last article of faith challenges us to put the first twelve principles into practice and become what we believe. Using his characteristic humor, multiple scriptures, and powerful quotations and stories, John Bytheway describes what it means not just to believe in, but to actually be honest, true, chaste, benevolent, and virtuous. In a world where things that are praiseworthy and of good report are becoming harder to find, it is more important than ever that we follow the Savior. And as the Lord helps us become what he wants us to become, we naturally gravitate toward the highest and noblest things in the world those things that are lovely and praiseworthy. In fact, we seek after these things. An ideal talk that ties in directly with the 2011 Young Men and Young Women theme.
