After spending eight years in a state-run home for girls, Mia is finally on her own. So she hits the road, determined to see the world that was always beyond her reach. But a chance encounter turns her journey into a shared adventure.

The privileged son of a successful lawyer, Levin is taking a break after grad school to travel in his parents' vintage camper. When he sees Mia hitchhiking at a rest stop in Germany, he feels compelled to pick her up before she risks taking the wrong ride…

As the two connect, Levin finds himself drawn to Mia's innocence and passion for life in a way he's never experienced before. Together, they set out for the distant deserts of Morocco—Mia's dream destination—and find themselves falling in love along the way. But when Mia's past suddenly catches up with them, the fight to stay together begins.

Will their newfound freedom—and their love—survive?
