Rethinking Prison Reentry: Transforming Humiliation into Humility Tony Gaskew
Rethinking Prison Reentry: Transforming Humiliation into Humility describes a prison-based education pedagogy designed to address a prevalent racial politics of shaming, self-segregation, and transgenerational learned helplessness. So many incarcerated black men face insurmountable psychosocial obstacles when attempting to make the successful transition back into ownership of their lives. Tony Gaskew confronts the issue of redemption and reconciliation head-on by critically examining the “triads of culpability” when it comes to crime and justice in America: (1) of those who commit crimes; (2) of those who enforce criminal laws; and (3) of those who stand by and do nothing.

He explores the growth of a black counterculture of crime that has created modern-day killing fields across urban neighborhoods and challenges the incarcerated black men trapped within its socially constructed lies, helping them to draw upon the strength of their cultural privilege to transform from criminal offender into incarcerated student.

Anna Hart:

As a student exactly feel bored to help reading. If their teacher inquired them to go to the library or make summary for some book, they are complained. Just minor students that has reading's soul or real their leisure activity. They just do what the educator want, like asked to go to the library. They go to at this time there but nothing reading significantly. Any students feel that reading is not important, boring and also can't see colorful photos on there. Yeah, it is being complicated. Book is very important for yourself. As we know that on this period, many ways to get whatever you want. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country.
